Step 1: Plan. We wanted our home to feel warm and welcoming, but what that looked like? No idea! So, we started collecting examples of colours and textures we loved, which helped narrow it down to rich, earthy tones and natural materials.

Bamboo, all the way! It's a beautiful, renewable material with a light and natural look.

Step 2: Furnish. A lot of the furniture is from our previous apartment. The add-ons were mostly ornaments and accessories, plus a few other items to make the space more flexible. Take the coffee tables, for instance. If the baby needs space to play, we just pick them up and push them aside.

Step 4: Prioritize. Living small has taught us one valuable lesson – that if it really matters, you can make space for it. Case in point, our dining room table. An eight-seater felt like a splurge at first, but with friends and family over so often, its size has served us well.

This lampshade is made with bits of bamboo that would have otherwise been thrown away, giving each one a unique pattern.

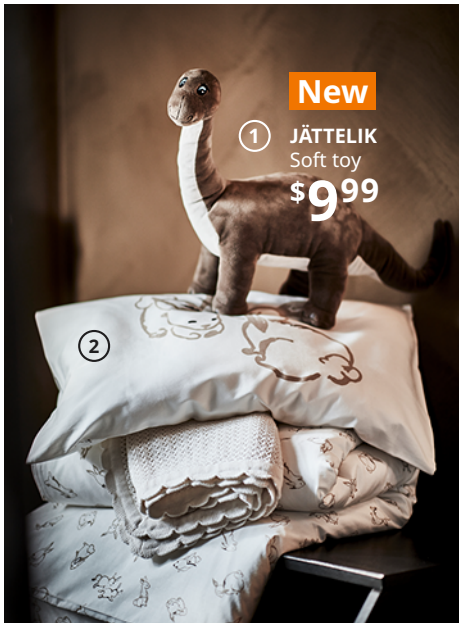
Step 5: Think long-term. Phew! The rush to get the nursery ready in time was real... but we made it. The idea for this space was simple: calm and gender-neutral, with furniture that can either grow up with baby, be reused for baby #2, or move elsewhere in the house later on.



Yay for a changing table that can become a chest of drawers. Either way, make sure it's secured to the wall for little one's safety.

Keep the kitchen's cabinet chaos in check, with these handwoven baskets made from banana leaf and rattan.

Shallow enough for tight spaces; big enough to hold shoes, hats, handbags, hairdryers...

It's got the peace, it's got the quiet, it's got the lighting. For AM makeup or PM emails, this corner is tough to beat.

This couple works hard at their jobs and in their community, and just as hard for their kids. After long days helping with homework, pitching softballs, cooking dinner or doing (yet another) load of laundry, a great night's sleep is most definitely deserved.

From empty, underbed space to an overachieving study corner.

Take the "should I wash this?" test

A lot of water and energy goes into a load of laundry, so here are four simple questions to ask before you throw something in the wash. The earth, and your clothes, will be better off for it:
– Could I wear this again?
– Could spot cleaning do the job?
– Is the washing machine full?
– Is the temperature set to 30°C?

And the pile grows. And grows. Isn't it time to treat that collection of bike gear, holiday decorations and gardening tools to a new, neat home? Welcome to possibly the most satisfying weekend project ever.

The power of textiles

If you're furnishing on a budget, fabric is your friend. Here, this wallet-friendly material takes many forms; like a DIY “backdrop” made from metre fabrics, makeshift wardrobe doors, and the upholstered bed itself. Combined, you get a softer, more romantic look – and even reduced noise for a sounder night’s sleep.

For long-lasting good looks that will see you through many seasons, light and neutral bedlinen is hard to beat.

A consciously chosen bedroom

It's not always easy to shop with sustainability in mind. But if you are planning on a needed room re-do, we have products that are made with materials and processes that are more planet-friendly. And, as always, at the best price possible. The choice is yours!

Rugs can last a lifetime with good care. If you want to start off resourcefully too, here's one made from recycled cotton.

Be a little selfish about your sleep

We all sleep differently. Some are more comfortable in a firm bed, others want a soft one. Some are always warm, others never warm enough. Regardless of where you stand - or actually, lie - there's a comfortable solution for you.

Make room for your new plus-one

Sleep is always important – but never more so than after the arrival of, well, your new arrival. And, because bedrooms don't grow just because your family does, making the most of the space you have is important.

Three basics of better lighting

Sometimes you walk into a room that just “feels” great, complete and welcoming. One reason why might surprise you: multiple sources of light. This helps the room work better for you but also helps to move your eye around the space, making it more pleasant to be in.

Functional lighting

The lamp with a mission. This concentrated, direct light helps you focus on specific tasks like reading, working or cooking.

Mood lighting

The lamp that wants you to feel cozy. A good example is integrated lighting – lights above the cabinet showcases your favourite things while creating a warm atmosphere.

Secrets to a beautifully balanced room

Want a living room full of rich colours and details that still looks put together? The key is a mix of courage and cohesion: don't be afraid to be bold but keep it all in balance with a few tried-and-true design guidelines.

Aim to balance visual weights of groups of things, too. Here, thin frames and a slim lamp balance the heavier sideboard.

Different patterns but similar colours. Sticking to a palette is a secret to successful mixing and matching.

A dream kitchen is all in the details

To complete a classic traditional-style kitchen, the secret is keeping your eye on the details, right on down to the littlest design decisions. We promise it's the way to turn your dream a reality.

Forms and finishes

For a traditional kitchen, consider handles and knobs with rounded forms in finishes such as chrome or brass.

A sink with style

On the table, too

Healthy land, thriving communities

Women from Chhattisgarh India take their harvest to market. Tribal communities in Chhattisgarh depend on land which is increasingly degraded.

We believe farmers have the power to heal the planet while they feed the world.

Farming is one of the world's most important professions, yet the majority of smallholder farmers in East Africa and India are living in poverty. Environmental degradation and the loss of biodiversity are among the root causes.

What if we could transform barren land into rich, fertile ecosystems that support thriving communities?

The IKEA Foundation's partner Commonland is working in Central India to do just that. This exciting programme brings communities together to restore a 2,000-hectare degraded landscape. The regenerated land will help 1,000 smallholder farmers create thriving businesses and provide their communities with food, water, clean air and employment.

Rural communities can gain so much more than a place to grow crops. People develop a renewed sense of hope and purpose, they create more jobs, revitalize their environment and earn reliable incomes.

We all depend on agriculture. The IKEA Foundation is committed to helping people grow their way to a more secure future for their families and our planet.
